CAPTURED BY PLATE.

Among the painful events connected with the present campaign has been the parting between General Patrick, Federal Marshal General, and his old brigade, composed of the Twentieth New York Militia and the Twenty-Sixth, Twenty-Third and Thirty-Second New York Volunteers. General Patrick came out in command of the brigade, and has kept it near him throughout his entire career in the Army of the Potomac. The attachment which sprung up between the troops and their commander is unsurpassed, and as many of them now about to return to their homes—their term of service having expired—it was determined to have their General a lasting testimonial of their appreciation and regard. Accordingly, this morning the general was invited to visit Aquia to bid farewell to the officers of the command. The meeting was most affecting. Colonel Rogers, a brief but eloquent speech, alluded to the associations connected with their career, and presented to the General the silver tea service provided by the several officers.

For a time the surprise and emotion of the General would not allow him to reply. After a moment he collected himself, and in a few words bid them all an affectionate adieu. It is a matter of regret that no photographic reporter was present. The speech of the General was a gem, sparkling with sentiments of the purest patriotism, with words of counsel to the young officers, and affectionate remembrance to all.

The service is a most magnificent affair, and consists of a silver urn, teapot, water pot, sugar dish, soap bowl, snuffer, plated water and tea bell, the whole costing two hundred dollars.

A portion of the brigade leaves to-morrow. Some of its members still remain near the staff of the General.

All quiet to-night on the Rappahannock.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS WITH THE ARMY.

The President and General-in-Chief in Consultation with General Hooker.

THE CORRESPONDENCE OF M. G. H. OSBORN.

FALMOUTH, Va., May 7, 1863.

At about ten o'clock this morning a special train, consisting of a locomotive and a single box car, arrived from Aquia creek, bringing to the station two distinguished visitors. President Lincoln and Major General Halleck were the sole occupants of the car, having left Washington at a very early hour this morning by steamer, and, sailing through from Aquia creek upon a couple of camp boats.

Immediately upon their arrival the President and the General-in-Chief were conducted to a carriage which had been for some time in waiting, and with a military cavalryman on either side of the vehicle were escorted to the headquarters of Major General Hooker. No demonstration was made by the few groups of officers and soldiers who were lounging about the depot, save an occasional touch of the visor by those who recognized in the tall, stooping form and thin, dark features the presence of the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States. His coming, although known at headquarters, seemed to take every body at the station by surprise.

After reaching the old headquarters camp, the President and General Halleck at once reported to General Hooker's tent, and entered into a conference, it is supposed, upon the result and the impending movements of the Army of the Potomac. They are now together, in deep consultation.

The President's countenance seemed to bear traces of great disappointment. His appearance was in every way that of an overtired and overworked man. General Halleck, on the other hand, seemed to a casual observer like a spirit, to be in the best of health and spirits.

OUR FORTRESS MONROE CORRESPONDENCE.

FORWARD MONROE, May 7, 1863.

His Withdrawal from Suffolk—When it Commenced—He is Reported in Front of Hooker on the 2d instant—New Plan of General Dix—Stoneman's Cavalry Within a Mile and a Half of Richmond—He Might have Captured Jeff. Davis and Cabinet—A Word of Garrison on Tactics Done to the Navy, &c., &c.

The withdrawal of Longstreet's army from the south side of the James river, which has been going on from the 20th ult., without the knowledge of General Peck to the 2d, that this intrepid rebel leader had been engaged on Saturday, the 2d instant, with a portion of the Army of the Potomac, seems to have disengaged the matured plan of Generals Dix and Peck considerably. However, the most important movements are on foot now, and in the course of being carried out, and when completed will be of the most vital importance to the Army of the Potomac in defeating and crushing the rebel hosts. What these movements are is not for the public to know at present, as on their success our defense depends. But the plan is deep and well concert ed, and cannot well fail. It is unnecessary to add that Major General Dix is engaged in understanding the movements personally, and to this end he has temporarily taken the field.

The dashingly raid of General Stoneman up to within the gates of Richmond is said to have been one of the most brilliant achievements of the war. From prisoners who came from Richmond yesterday I learn that the greatest garrison in the rebel capital, owing to the near approach of the "Yankee" cavalry to that city, as every soldier has been sent to the support of Lee, even the prisons were guarded by civilians in garrison temporarily for this duty. When it became known that Stoneman was within a mile and a half of the city, people coming from church had muskets thrust into their hands and ordered to defend the city. How easy it would have been for General Stoneman to have entered the city, gobbled up Jeff Davis, his Cabinet and Congress, and set fire to the house of treason, and carried his trophies to this place. Such a feat would have been a greater achievement than the defeat of Lee's army, as the destruction of King Bull would have virtually put an end to the war, and the name of Stoneman would have been blessed forth to the world in letters of gold. But there may be another fate for this arch traitor Davis which he cannot escape.

The Richmond press pays the highest compliments to General Stoneman's irreversibility and dashingly raid, and even dares to call his troops "Vandals," "Terrorists" and "out-thrusts," and admits that during the progress of Stoneman's corps all the rebels on the line have been beaten with the greatest consternation and regard to power and property.

In my opinion, Lee, written about a fortnight ago, I think that General Lee had withdrawn from the army, but had not yet done so, and had rallied his generals to withdraw from the Mansfield. In this I was misinformed. All requests made by the Commanding General of the department on the Adairville have been promptly complied with, and at this time I wrote to him that he had ordered his garrisons under Lieutenant Col. John H. Davis, 2nd Georgia, First Lieutenant J. T. Morris, 2nd Georgia, First Lieutenant J. M. Gathorne, Washington artillery. First Lieutenant E. Green, Washington artillery. Second Lieutenant H. Rivers, 1st North Carolina. First Lieutenant F. B. Morris, 2nd Georgia. First Lieutenant T. B. Connor, 2nd Georgia. Captain J. J. A. Sharp, 2nd Georgia. Captain W. J. Brown, 2nd Georgia. Captain J. F. Patten, 2nd Georgia. Captain F. Ferguson, 2nd Georgia. Third Lieutenant G. D. Carpenter, 5th North Carolina. Second Lieutenant C. W. Morris, 5th North Carolina. First Lieutenant G. A. J. Sechler, 5th North Carolina. Second Lieutenant G. E. Shire, 5th North Carolina. First Lieutenant J. Johnson, 5th North Carolina. Captain J. D. Heron, 5th North Carolina. Captain J. W. Beard, 21st North Carolina. First Lieutenant J. S. Der, 5th Louisiana. Second Lieutenant T. J. Murphy, 5th Louisiana. First Lieutenant T. J. Weller, 5th Louisiana. First Lieutenant J. W. Williams, 5th Louisiana. Captain W. J. Lyle, 5th Virginia. First Lieutenant P. B. Moore, 2nd Georgia. Second Lieutenant J. Caldwell, 2nd Georgia. Captain J. F. Steiner, 15th Mississippi. Captain J.
